

Abdul-Bassit Abubakari is an early career researcher and academic. Worked at the University of Ghana Business School where he provided teaching and research support in public administration and management studies at graduate and undergraduate levels. Currently, he is a PHD candidate at the University of Ghana offering Public Administration and Policy Management. His research interests and expertise are in the areas of governance and development with special focus on intersection between politics and development, energy, social protection and urban informality. He has provided research assistance to both national and international clients (e.g. DAI-Europe, UNICEF, OSIWA, EU Commission and OXFAM) across several policy domains including extractive sector governance, public financial management, security, education, social protection and urban governance. In 2017, he received two postgraduate academic excellence awards from the University of Ghana for emerging the best graduating student in his cohort.

LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/abdul-bassit-abubakar>